Mike Tapp and Starmer

Israel-fanatic and Labour Friends of Israel \(LFI\) vice-chair Labour MP Mike Tapp isn't the brightest or most moral bulb in the box.

Tapp thinks it's great for police to beat the crap out of a helpless suspect. So maybe it's no surprise he didn't see what a door he was opening when he tried to taunt Green party leader Zack Polanski about the arrest of grannies and vicars opposing genocide. But asking Polanski what a convicted terrorist should look like? Come on.

Who'd ever have guessed?

But that's exactly what Tapp did. Polanski had rightly pointed to the Starmer regime's war on freedom of speech and Tapp thought he was being clever:

Tell me, Zack, what should someone who is convicted of a terror related offence look like?
I'm intrigued.

It wasn't rocket science. Cue the part of X that has humanity to point out the genocidal terror state that Tapp fanboys:

Lots of people had a similar idea. Like pointing to the actual wanted war criminal who runs the terror state:

The wanted war criminal who was the target of much toadying by Starmerâ??s government:

And his president, who received a warm welcome from Tappâ??s boss Keir Starmer:

Or the supposed â??most moralâ?? armyâ??s predilection for dressing up in the lingerie of Palestinian women it has murdered or ethnically cleansed:

Others pointed to the welcome shown by Starmer to the now re-branded Syrian president, Ahmed al-Sharaa, a former member of Hayat Tahrir al-Sham (HTS). The terrorist group was on the UKâ??s banned list until Keir Starmer removed their name in October 2025 and rolled out the Downing Street red carpet for al-Sharaa:

You should know. Your PM welcomes all sorts of war criminals into his office.

The double standards that build up the shaky credibility of who the government labels terrorists are clear for all to see:

Well he was one a few months ago according to this government. Apparently according to this government, now heâ??s not.

You use proscription as a political tool rather than a legal one and apply it where it's convenient and where geopolitical interests dictate. pic.twitter.com/MtGnct8zMf

Others went for Tapp's own odiousness directly, with unflattering comparisons to genitalia featuring prominently:

Definitely not like that, you sweaty little ball-bag.

It looks more like a UK MP supporting a genocidal regime, currently engaged in terrorism on the Palestinian people.

â?? MOCHA (@MOCHARTY) June 15, 2026

Fuck off you genocidal terrorist supporting cunt

â?? Liam (@lc02848) June 15, 2026

And for his own eager collusion in Israel's terror:

And that of his whole Quisling parliamentary group:

Some arguably got the wrong flag in the background, though:

And of course, some simply pointed out whom the Starmer-Tapp axis does consider a terrorist while turning a blind eye to the whole terror state and its racist ideology:

Well this, according to Labour. pic.twitter.com/9qkbLR8VLq

Yes, the average box of Palestinian dates could have seen it coming, but Tapp didnâ??t. But then, Israel and its supporters are a lot more famous for their arrogance than their brains
